The attending surgeon expressed little hope for his recovery. Unexpectedly, the injuties to Jockey Earl, who was hurt yesterday, proved fatal. The boy lapsed into unconsciousness and died last night from concussion of the brain. The racing proved very interesting and was witnessed by a large crowd. The performance of Dr. Boyle was the feature. He gave away much weight, and, displaying great gameness, took the mile handicap by a nose from Eonic. The weather was fine and the track fast. Summary:

In the one-mile relay championship Amherst did not start, which left the contest between Yale and Pennsylvania. The home representative led well, but the second Pennsylvania man was beaten out by the Yale representative, and after that the blue was never headed. YANGER AND BROAD FIGHT AT LOU-ISVILLE NEXT SATURDAY.

Both Men Are Training for the Twenty-Round Bout-Kid McCoy Is Considered a Back Number.

The next fight of importance on the fistic calendar is the twenty-round bout slated for Louisville next Saturday night between Benny Yanger and Kid Broad. The boys will go twenty rounds before the Southern Athletic Club, and, coming, as it does, on Derby day, will be witnessed by a large crowd. The fight will take place in the Auditorium, where Bob Gray gave so many fistic entertainments before the Young Corbett-Terry McGovern bout was prevented by an injunction. A large crowd of Indiana men will be at the ringside.

reports from that city discredit the rumors in circulation a short time ago that Broad would not be able to get into good shape for his fight with Yanger. He takes a tenmile run every day and then does gymnaslum work, completing his training with several rounds with his sparring partners. On top of a ten-mile spin yesterday he sparred twenty rounds with one of his box-ing partners, and then skipped the rope 500 times. Broad will spar with Marvin Hart this afternoon. This will give him a chance to punch as hard as he desires, as Hart is a big fellow, able to stand the blows. If Yanger wins the fight he will be in line for a battle with Young Corbett for the championship. He is the most promising lad in that class, and critics pick him as a winner against Broad. Young Corbett has Yanger as long as the latter is under the management of John Hertz, but should Yanger vanquish Broad and then win from Eddie Hanlon in June the public will demand that Young Corbett give Yanger a McCoy may go abroad for awhile, as he will probably give up the ring for some time, at least. George Considine, McCoy's backer, says the Kid is "all in" as a fighter. After returning to New York, Considine is quoted as saying: "Root couldn't fight a little bit, though he stripped well. McCoy was "hog fat" and acted like a 'has been.' I had some money up and lost. It'll be the last dollar I'll bet on McCoy for some time. It looks as if he is a back number." Friends of McCoy have the same opinion regarding him as that given by Considine. McCoy's pace has been a fast one and he did not have the stamina to win from such a man as Root. It has been alleged that Homer Selby threw ammonia in Root's face during the fight in order to bilnd him so that the Kid might stand a chance of winning. Selby acknowledged that he had an atomizer filled with ammonia and tried to throw it on McCoy's back, but that he missed his aim and the liquid struck Root in the face. Regarding Root's charges of Performance During the Builders' Trial on Saturday.

BRISTOL, R. I., April 25.-In a fifteenmile beat to windward down Narragansett bay, out to sea, and a long run before the wind back to her moorings here, the Reliance, the new aspirant for the honor of defending the America's cup, was given her first builders' trial to-day. At its conclusion C. Oliver Iselin, the managing member of the syndicate of owners, said he was

Her performance demonstrated that, de-Club, but since his recent defeat the match spite the apprehension that she would be stiff because of her supposed scowlike features, she heeled readily and easily to her sailing lines in a very moderate breeze. Once down to these lines, she refused to heel further, giving evidence of the power which her flat-floored hull was designed to impart. She was quick to come about, averaging about 27 seconds in stays, made some fuss under her bow at times, and steered with only one man at the helm. Designer Nat Herreshoff and Capt. Charles Barr alternated at the wheel. The party on board included C. Oliver Iselin, William Butler Dunlan, jr., Newberry D. Thorne, E. D. Morgan, Lewis Cass Ledyard, William B. Captain Sycamore has great faith in Shamrock III and will sail

Sunbeam, and William B. Leeds's steam yacht Nomai, the latter carrying a party. The Reliance left her moorings off the Herreshoff shops at 9:30 this morning. There was a very light northwest air moving. She carried a mainsail, small club topsail and working stay and jib. For new sails they set well. The only notable feature about them was in the mainsail, the leach of which was rounded outward in a faint curve, adding a little canvas, so that it hung loosely to leeward for the length of the battens. Later, in a heavier breeze, the bellying of the sail took up this slack and the sail set nearly perfectly. Comparison with the Columbia showed that the Reliance's mainsail is longer on the leach and higher in the peak.

For the first hour the Reliance drifted a mile. Then the wind freshened and hauled to the southwest, making her course a dead beat to windward. An intermediate jil topsail was run up. The yacht responded quickly, and heeling gently began to give the first suggestion of her sailing qualities. Captain Barr worked her tenderly and easlly down the bay, making slow tacks, apparently aiming to discover any weak points in her rigging. During the beat down the east passage the Reliance steadily increased her speed. Long before reaching Newport she was lying over to smart puffs and driving along at a gait which must have delighted Mr. Herreshoff. As the wind grew heavier the working jib topsail was taken in and a baby jib top-sail hoisted in its place. The last leg before reaching Newport was sailed in a is still splendid burst of speed. She arrived at her Lajoie. moorings off Goat island at 12:40 p. m. She Pitch lay there two hours, while dinner was serve dto the party and crew. Just as signs of activity began to be manifested the Columbia arrived and passed by, coming to anchor in the harbor. It was then seen that the bow of the Reliance is longer and more slender than that of Columbia and her stern longer, wider and thinner. There was a little more weight in the wind when, at 2:45 p. m., the Reliance filled away from her moorings and beat out through the eastern entrance. Her long bow occasionally sent a spurt of foam flying, but there was not sea enough to deter-mine whether that long overhang would make sufficient fuss to hold her back in rough water. Three miles outside of the lightship she came about, and, with sheets free, started on a reach back to the entrance to the bay. This was the fastest and most spectacular run of the day. Every inch of canvas was drawing, and the Reliance was making a white lather of water under her lee bow and along the lee rail, which was just awash. The racer rushed by the light-ship at a gait which would have taxed the speed of the average steam yacht. It was on this point of sailing that her long overhang forward did good service, dipping as her stern lifted and gigging her sailing length much in excess of that imparted by the ordinary bow.

Approaching the entrance to the bay, she took the wind more on the quarter, and a spinnaker was run up and broken out for the first time. The operation occupied one minute and twenty seconds. The new sail was of moderate size. It added considerable to her speed. The press tug, which was following at a rate of nine knots an hour, was unable to maintain sufficient pace, and the Sunbeam and Naomi were left astern. The Reliance finished the run under mainsail and jib, and tied up off the Herreshoff docks after a successful trial and without mishap. Mr. Iselin announced that the Reliance would be taken out for another trial to-morrow afternoon.

It is clear from the Reliance's performance to-day that, under fair sailing conditions, she will derive whatever advantage there is in the added sailing length in her long overhang forward and aft. Her after overhang quickly touched the water when she heeled, but she seemed to carry her bow considerably higher. Her stem seemed compare her with the Columbia or the Conthe Reliance responded quickly to her helm It was repeatedly remarked that she pointher moorings their smiling countenances in-dicated satisfaction only second to that of oughbreds on the Eastern tracks this seathe designer and her owners.

to slide over the surface rather than to cut through it, and the slight splashing at the bow did not appear to retard her. So far as could be noted without opportunity to stiution, she carries her larger spread of canvas easily, standing up well to the puffs. Although the two steering wheels indicate that Designer Herreshoff anticipated trouble in steering her, nothing of the kind was manifested to-day. At no time was there more than one man at the wheel, and ed very close to the wind, and, although her main sheet was trimmed in flat, she seemed to sail fast under these conditions. The promptness with which the sails were handled to-day indicate that the crew of the Reliance is fast learning the ropes. Not an accident marred their work, and at
